

Abstract

Students in Uganda realize the precarious situation of backwardness in the rural areas where the majority of Ugandans live and work. When given a chance, however, students become good agents in the engagement with society through outreach programs.

Mbarara University has established collaboration with local and international organizations in the implementation of projects that offer community services in which student involvement is integrated.

Professor Frederick I.B. Kayanja